Two people experience the devastating loss of their spouses. The forest and trees bring them together and what follows is an unlikely love story mirroring a favorite fairy tale of the widow's daughter.

The story of Harry Crane and Amanda Jeffers began slowly and in some parts, was a little uninteresting. However, the last part of the book was filled with intrigue and excitement as the fairy tale came alive.

I was interested in this story because of the title of the book. I recommend this book to others if they like to read fiction. It was fairly easy to read and became more interesting and exciting as the plot and characters developed. I also enjoyed the happy ending.
